PHYSICIAN IN TROUBLE

Sent Hookworm Specimen Through Mail in Improvised Container.
Another Virginia physician is in trouble, and is facing indictment for violation of the postal laws because he sent an improvised container through the mail, containing a specimen to be examined for hookworm, which was broken in transit. As this is by no means the first offense of the kind, a vigorous prosecution is expected to folicw. The State Health Deparlment, to which the specimen was sent, has issued another warning to physicians to use the standard containers which it provides, iree of charge, for the use of those who wish to send specimens.

Lambert Martin, manager of the sanatorium, is postmaster. The business of the new office is considerable, and its establishment is a great convenience to the 116 patients under the care of the State there cattle tested and found to react should be branded with the letter. The letters not less than three inches in height, on the right side of the neck. It is hoped that all States will enact laws requiring this to be done.

Further, it was recommended that the test governing the interstate shipments of cattle should be controlled by the United States Department of Agriculture in a manner similar to that now employed in making mallein tests for the shipment of horses to Canada. This would insure that no cattle would be sent from one State to another unaccompanied by a certificate from a veterinary surgeon authorized by the State where the shipment originated to make such certification. Then he would be responsible, and a faise statement would result in forfeit of his license.

The visiting surgeons yesterday afternoon visited the abattoir near this city to witness the slaughter of three reacting cattle sent here from Charlottesville. Unaffected meat from such animals may be sold.
